PARCEL POST REPUBLICAN LAW

In Spite of the Fact That Some Democrats Make Other Claims.

Congressman David J. Lewis is the Democratic nominee for the Senate in Maryland, and is making his campaign largely on the representation that he is the father of the parcel post and that the parcel post is a Democratic measure.

Lewis became a member of the House of Representatives March 4, 1911, and, in his statement before the Bourne parcel post committee, said that immediately after his official duties began he endeavored to give this subject the consideration its importance merited.

Five years prior to that time, in 1906, Jonathan Bourne, Jr., was a candidate for the Senate from Oregon and made his campaign partly upon the advocacy of a parcel post with rates varying according to distance—the zone system—which we now have in force.

Bourne was elected, became Chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, was appointed chairman of a sub-committee which conducted the parcel post inquiry, drafted the measure which was incorporated in the post office appropriation bill in the Senate in 1912, in opposition to the Lewis scheme for government condemnation and purchase of the express companies, and the Bourne bill, with some changes made in conference at the request of Congressman Moon, of Tennessee, is now on the statute books.

The Senate at that time was Republican, the House was Democratic, and the President was Republican.

That short statement of facts should effectively and forever dispose of the claim that the parcel post was a Democratic measure or that Lewis was its father, or even a distant uncle, for Lewis never favored anything but government purchase of the express companies, which he proposed to transform into a government agency for carrying both express and freight, as his official statements will show.

Miss Emma Hale has returned to Paragold, Ark., where she was for over a year, but returned home for a visit a few weeks ago.

Bring all your old magazines, Ladies Home Journals, Pictorial Reviews and such like magazines to the Chronicle office and we will pay you 50 cents a hundred pounds.

Mrs. D. Woodworth and Mrs. J. Q. Adams, both of Chattanooga, and Miss Blanche Frazier, of Birmingham, Ala., have been the guests of Mrs. Martha Rea for some weeks. They returned home Friday owing to the threatened railroad strike. They were much pleased with this cool and equable climate free from mosquitoes and other annoying insects.

Sheriff Sam Tollett was sworn in as sheriff of the county yesterday. County Clerk W. D. Heigecoth administering the oath. Ex-Sheriff John Q. Wyatt will move his family to what is known as the John Walker cottage owned by S. W. The Sunday school class of Mrs. Pearl Keyes and a few invited guests spent the afternoon picnicking at Ozone falls and lake Sunday.

Plenty of Time Books at the Chronicle office: two weeks' size and monthly, only 10c. Stenographers' note books also.

At the Chronicle office you can get pen tablets, examination tablets, fountain pen ink in five and ten cent bottles, pocket note books, stenographer's note books, Crane's fine stationery in two-quire boxes and other stationery such as you do not find elsewhere in this county.

J. S. Reed, wife and children and Mrs. Belle Knowles, arrived home Sunday from a trip of some weeks in an auto. They visited Washington, D. C., and many intervening points of interest. The trip proved a very delightful one and a splendid outing for all.

Through the kindness of Prof. Frank March we are able to give a very interesting account of the work of the Country Life Institute held here Friday and Saturday. While Prof. March doubtless had no thought of making any charge for his services, we believe in the principles of reciprocity and have extended his subscription a year for the service rendered.

Crane's stationery by the quire and envelopes by the bunch at the Chronicle office. Nothing made better than Crane's.
